

PANGAEA ZOOLOGICAL PARK

Over 1,200 animals

5 miles of pathways

400 acres of exhibits

30,000 native plants

Next year we are celebrating 45 years!

History of the Pangaea Zoological Park

Located in Atlantis, Florida, the Pangaea Zoo is on 600 acres, with 400 acres being developed. The Zoo houses over 1200 animals in their natural habitats of trees, grass, rocks, and ponds.

The zoo first opened in 1972 with the Savannas exhibit that housed four giraffes and two zebras. In 1986, the North America exhibits first opened and featured both Prairie and Desert exhibits.

From the beginning, education and conservation have been a central part of our mission at the Pangaea Zoo. We are dedicated to minimizing waste and conserving our natural resources at both a local and international level. In addition, we are heavily involved in the global efforts to protect the most critically endangered species on the plane.

New orangutan Millie arrived in August!

Millie was born in Borneo where she was orphaned while still very young. She spent three years at the North Point Zoo before arriving at the Pangaea Zoo. Millie is very curious and loves to explore and watch all of the zoo visitors. She is getting along very well with the other 3 orangutans at the park—Sam, Sydney, and Max.

New Renovations for Australia Landing

The Pangaea Zoo is undergoing renovations as they design and build a new Australia Landing exhibit. This exhibit will include a more modern exhibit for koalas, wallabys, and other animals from the outback. In addition, there will be a eucalyptus forest and an education center.

The new Australia Landing exhibit will be made up of three large air-conditioned rooms, plus two outside screened-in areas. A small opening will allow the koalas to travel back and forth, depending on the weather.

The Pangaea Zoo currently has one 3-year-old male koala named Bo. Zoo officials say they are currently working on finding a mate for Bo to coincide with the grand opening of Australia Landing, which is expected to be in September 2016.

Zookeepers are very excited to bring a bit of the outback to the Pangaea Zoo.
